Is there really anything to all those “money” books? Absolutely yes, says Jim Guarino respected financial expert. Getting rich is not the primary motivation of people who buys books about money. According to Jim, people want to get real money so that they can opt out of the over-worked, fast-paced lifestyle for a one that keeps them closer to home and family.

Jim Guarino lays out a carefully designed game plan in his new book, Get Real! MONEY: Get The Money You Want in Just 7 Minutes a Day (New Discovery, January 18, 2005). Jim Guarino says, “Most people need money explained to them in terms they can understand, and then some help using what they’ve learned.” He is absolutely convinced that financial opportunity abounds in America, and that it has never been better – but it’s reserved for those who go after it. In Get Real! MONEY”, Jim provides proven solutions: Learn

People want real solutions – real fast. They want solutions they can implement quickly because they’re strapped for time or behind schedule. They want straightforward and easy-to-understand advice on the best ways to accomplish goals such as; funding retirement, paying for their kids education, eliminating debt, or simply how to generate additional income without taking huge risks.

Americans want to get off the treadmill because they now realize there are other alternatives to get real money – they need a new game plan that will work in our new global economy. A new game plan may include a small business, using smart tax strategies, or buying investment real estate on the side while holding down a regular job or remaining in a traditional business, as explained in Get Real! MONEY. Guarino asserts that in order to “get real money,” a person will need to develop the Get Real! Philosophy™, and by learning his Five Proven Money Principles™ outlined in his book.

The same strategies that make people rich can be used by anybody – there are no real secrets except one...The 7 Minute Secret™. Knowledge alone doesn't produce results. We need consistent, focused action seven minutes a day, every day, no days off. By knowing what to and how to do it, and then applying it—even little steps will eventually produce an avalanche of real money.

“Old ideas of how money works just don't work like it used to. Millions of people feel disillusioned because they've been taught that a good education would mean job security,” says Guarino. With more money, people can find the freedom and time to do the things they want to do. “Our generation has different desires, expectations, and needs than did our parents when June and Ward Clever were in style”, says Jim. Traditional education no longer produces the financial safety and security people want. New education is needed for financial success in the new economy, and the real solutions are in Get Real! MONEY.
